

TERESA SULLIVAN STEPS DOWN AFTER SUCCESSFUL RUN AS UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT

TODAY TERESA Sullivan announced that she is stepping down after a successful and historic run as University President. "I've been contemplating the move for some time. After talking it over with my family, I think it's the right thing to do," she said in an official release.

Sullivan received a standing ovation in the Rotunda Dome Room this morning from hundreds of students and faculty, including the Board of Visitors, who had elected her during their last session. "While the average tenure for a University president is 15 years, Teresa was able to accomplish just as much tenure in a mere 6 months," said board member Donald Shaw. "Besides, we already formed the presidential exploratory committee four months ago. This is really for the best."

In retiring, Sullivan joins a long line of UVA presidents who have held the office of president and then subsequently retired. University historians are comparing Sullivan to former US President William Henry Harrison, who stepped down after only 32 days in office following his death. Known for his ambitious intentions and prominent spot on "Know Your Presidents" breakfast placemats, he set the precedent for Sullivan's historic presidency.

During her brief time here, Sullivan oversaw many impressive equilibria at UVA. According to Dr. Larry Sabato, director of the Center for Politics, Sullivan's legacy will be defined "less by what happened, than by what didn't happen during her tenure."

STUDENT HAS LIFE CHANGING EXPERIENCE DURING HIS ASB TRIP TO AMERICA

HADJIRI NAMAD, a junior at the University of Kabul, was proud to have been granted the opportunity to work with a number of over-privileged Americans this spring break. Instead of tending his herd of sheep or arming children with Soviet-era weapons, he volunteered to spend his week helping those in need.

"It was hard work, building 401Ks for the locals with my bare hands," said Namad. "Hammering together a four page sociology essay for a struggling third-year really changes your perspective on life. No longer will I take my agrarian lifestyle for granted."

In addition to building beer pong tables and helping students pick out the right Sperry Topsiders, Namad was given the opportunity to help create an iTunes playlist for an upcoming UGuides party.

"I'm now back at school with so much more experience than my classmates who chose to enjoy more traditional spring breaks. Most of my friends can't even locate the United States on a map," he remarked as the mudbrick wall behind him collapsed.

Despite his testimonial, most of Namad's friends are skeptical. "Why would you trade three goats to travel halfway across the world to help over-privileged Americans when we have at least a dozen over-privileged Afghans right here?" asked Abdul Qadir, 17-year-old shepherd and father of four. "He's just trying to build his resume."

POLICE INVESTIGATE POSSIBLE HAZING INCIDENT AT DKE

THE DISCOVERY OF sixteen bullet-ridden corpses under the floorboards of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity has prompted an investigation into what officials believe may qualify as an instance of “hazing.”

“While it has not yet been determined whether this incident does in fact constitute hazing, we believe the fraternity may have violated University policy and possibly even state law,” said University spokeswoman Karen Jansen.

Police executed a search warrant this morning and seized a number of suspicious items, including 6 machine guns, an M-4, and 16 large plastic bags. Additionally, police searched through the fraternity’s computers and found the following email:

“Tonight we kill the goats and throw them in the river. We’ll start with

Police are unsure exactly what this message implies, but think it may be hazing-related and potentially connected to the dead bodies.

“It’s definitely something we’re looking into,” explained Chief of Police Michael Gibson. “But we’re certainly not going to jump to any conclusions.”

Members of DKE have privately indicated that the pledges may have been “dared” to line up against the wall and be gunned down and thrown into the river, but little evidence exists to support their testimony.

Police are waiting to talk with the two pledges that survived the ordeal, both of which were transferred to UVa Medical Center a few hours after the incident for treatment for “blood loss” and “decapitation.” Investigators are currently trying to find a time slot for the interviews around the pledges’ line-ups and dinner-duty schedules.

FRATERNITY RANKINGS ENGRAVED ON STONE TABLETS BROUGHT DOWN FROM MT. SINAI

IT WAS revealed Tuesday that the ever-shifting fraternity rankings at the University of Virginia would no longer be up for debate as Moses, leader of the Israelites, emerged from atop Mt. Sinai clutching two massive stone tablets inscribed with Official Fraternity Rankings sent down from the Almighty.

“Behold, Yahweh hath spoken and brought forth thy official rankings for all eternity,” declared Moses. “Look upon thy Holy List of Lists and tremble.”

The threat of God’s Eternal Wrath, however, has done little to quell debate on the subject.

“I mean Moses is Jewish, so he’s probably in Sammy, which would explain why they’re at number nine,” said fourth year KA John Coddigon, adding that “God is definitely a PiKA or Chi Phi, because they are way way too high.”

The Rankings have also caused a stir in the religious and scholarly communities. “God being a member of the Greek community makes sense when you think about it,” explained Religious Studies Professor Richard Beckenbauer. “The rituals, the mistreatment of women, the near-constant hazing of Jews throughout history...it all kinda adds up.”

Yahweh could not be reached for comment, having instituted a new 10,000:1 girl-guy ratio for entrance at the Pearly Gates. At press time, our reporter was still waiting in line outside the Gates, unable to get past Saint Peter, who was sitting on a couch and turning away first-year males.

RESEARCHERS NOTE GROWING TREND IN STUDENT PRE-PREGAMING

TODAY SOCIOLOGY Professor Thomas Guterbock released the results of his yearlong study on the drinking habits of UVA students. The study concluded that pre-gaming, the act of drinking slightly cheaper alcohol with slightly fewer people in a slightly smaller area before moving elsewhere, has increased twenty-fold due to the introduction of what Guterbock calls "Pre-pregaming."

As study participant and third-year Christine Ryan explained, "I usually start out my weekends drinking rubbing alcohol and Sprite Zero in a broom closet before joining my roommates in the bathroom to chug Nyquil. After that, we head down to the foyer to chug Four Lokos before stumbling into the Virginian and running up a tab on mint juleps. I have such a great time! I'm always the life of the pre-pregame!"

Charlottesville residents have also integrated pre-pregaming into their typical night out. Chief of Police Timothy J. Longo reports that over 30 townies were arrested last Saturday while participating in a number of drug-related pre-pregames between First and Twelfth Streets.

"Smoking methamphetamines alone in a porta potty before freebasing cocaine with a friend in a shed before chewing peyote with a group of degenerates in an alley is simply not something we are going to put up with," remarked Longo. All 30 townies are currently pre-gaming federal prison with a stay in the local jail.

This growing trend is not just tied to illegal substances. Several members of the Agape Student Fellowship say they have incorporated pre-pregaming into their meetings. "I think the Bible makes it clear that even God agrees with this concept. After all, the Old Testament is just a pregame for the New Testament, which is really just a pregame for the second-coming of Christ," said first-year Ruth Hopewell.

The students start by reading Bible verses silently to themselves in bed before reading them aloud to each other in pews, before ultimately shrieking in tongues on the altar.

Professor Guterbock predicts that pre-gaming will continue to increase in an ever-cascading spiral of preemptive intoxication. However, he admits that there are some discrepancies in the data, as not a single one of his students has ever pre-gamed a lecture by doing the assigned reading.

UNIVERSITY TRANSIT Service announced yesterday that 3rd Year veteran and All-American Northliner Donald Malone has accepted an invitation to join the Greyhound Bus Association and would not be returning for another season.

"People doubted me my entire life," said Malone to reporters gathered at the Alderman Library bus stop. "But ever since the day I first stepped behind the wheel, I knew that I would one day drive a 40-seater professionally." While a triumphant day for Malone, many are saddened by the loss of one of the University's best drivers. "I remember training Donny on his first day, when he was just a rookie," recalled UTS manager and chief route specialist Rick Nichols. "He jumped two curbs, nearly hit three first years and side-swiped a parked Subaru, but just look at him now."

"Obviously I am humbled by this opportunity to take my game to the next level," commented Malone. His projected salary is still expected to remain at $8.25 an hour.

PHILOSOPHY MAJOR THINKS OF JOB, THEREFORE JOB EXISTS

COCKE HALL is in an uproar today after fourth-year Michael Redding submitted his distinguished majors thesis titled "I Think, Therefore Jobs Exist" to the University's highly regarded Center for Philosophical Thought and Shelter.

Redding says his paper builds on other famous works, including Descartes' essay on the likelihood of paid philosophy jobs, A Slight and Metaphysical Doubt (1624) and Hume's classic treatise on philosophical employment, As I Lay on My Parents' Futon (1745).

But University Philosophy professors and parking lot attendants are skeptical.

Most agree that the argument is valid, in that the conclusion follows from the premise, but not sound, in that the author is a "twat."

"Doubt is the beginning of wisdom," explained one professor, "And wisdom is one of man's least employable qualities."

In light of the controversy surrounding Redding's paper, University Career Services (UCS) announced that it is boosting its efforts to track down the elusive "thinking jobs," traditionally overshadowed by the more popular "actual jobs" and "rim jobs."

"Philosophy jobs have been hard to come by ever since the economy took a turn for the worst in 1792," said UCS counselor Mary Heindler. "A philosophy major hasn't been gainfully employed since 86', when one accidentally tripped over a pile of National Guard applications and was enlisted before he could regain consciousness."

Key transition in Redding's paper "I Think, Therefore Job Exists"

A recent Business Week report, however, suggests that UCS may find it difficult to deliver. The magazine's most recent "Employability Rankings" placed philosophy majors ahead of English majors, but behind Sociology PhDs, escaped convicts and North African Dictators.

Redding remains underterred, stating that next week he hopes to publish the second half of his thesis, "My Philosophy Girlfriend, Existence of (2011)."

MS. KATHY STILL HIGH FROM 1976 HIT

AN INVESTIGATION into University medical records has revealed that Ms. Kathy, better known as the 'Super-Happy Friendly Lady at Newcomb,' is still experiencing the effects of a marijuana hit she took in 1976. Despite abstaining from pot for the 35 years since, Ms. Kathy continues to test positive for THC (the psychoactive component of marijuana), putting her in third place behind Bob Marley and Willie Nelson for the longest continuous high in history. Local experts have confirmed that the initial hit must have been "massive," way beyond the capability of current paraphernalia technology. Despite concerted effort, YJ staffers have been unable to replicate her results.

include successfully navigating the difficult transition period following Casteen's retirement, witnessing the completion of the South lawn project last spring, and being present when the school brought in over 3125 new first-years last August, successfully negating the loss of 3137 graduating fourth-years. Local pundits have consistently praised Sullivan for maintaining the academics, demographics, and geographical location of the University throughout her administration.

Other accomplishments include erecting numerous wire fences in complex patterns outside Newcomb and having the least chest hair of any President, edging out Colgate T. Darden by a few hairs.

"During my time here I have tried to position the University as an institution of higher education where students take classes," said Sullivan. "I hope that I have succeeded."

Although the Sullivan Era did not last long, many students say they will always remember her time here for what it was:

brief. "They'll probably name a building after her just to be sure," remarked second-year Sarah Dawkins.

"She wrote some great emails," added another student. "Her non-denominational holiday greeting honestly didn't offend me."

Sullivan will be inaugurated as the University's eighth president this Friday, April 15th at 3 pm on the Lawn. This will be followed by light refreshments and her official farewell ceremony at 5.

FETUS GETS INTO COUPE'S WITH NO QUESTIONS ASKED

IN AN HISTORIC moment for underage students everywhere, an unborn fetus was offered entrance into Charlottesville's Coupe De Ville's Bar this past Monday.

"A lot of my friends had been telling me to come out to bars with them for some time now," said the fetus. "I was pretty skeptical at first, especially considering that I look like a zygote. But then they told me about this really cool place on the Corner that just does not give a sh-- how old you are."

As the fetus does not yet know its gender, it could not decide if it should be spitting game or posing for a few dozen photographs. After a few one dollar Red Stripes, however, the fetus got tired of the crowd, most of whom were at least fourteen or fifteen years older than it.

The fetus reportedly moved on to Trinity, only to be turned away by the bouncer there because of his "questionable ID." "Most nights I'm pretty chill," said the Trinity bouncer, "but with ABC cracking down lately, there was no way I could let it in with an expired Hawaiian fake."

MAN'S BEST FRIEND NO LONGER DOG

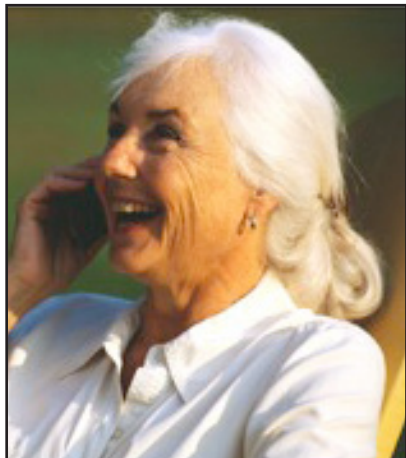

LOCAL MAN Michael Carey announced yesterday that his new best friend was next door neighbor and 70 inch flat screen TV owner Gerald Allen, leaving his two and a half year old Black Lab, Rusty, sad and alone.

Allen, who reportedly has a pool and shares a passion for the music of Steely Dan, is a much better fit for the position of Carey's best friend than Rusty, who reportedly pees on the floor when the vacuum cleaner is on.

"Rusty's a good dog, but man's best friend?" said Carey as he fired up Allen's George Foreman grill. "The only thing we have in common is that we both like to take naps. I'm sure he'll get over it."

Yellow Journal Apologizes for the Delay

To Our Readers and Any Homeless Using This as a Blanket:

We, the writers and editors of the Yellow Journal, would like to sincerely apologize for the delay. It has been over five months since the release of our first publication and you, our semi-loyal readers, deserve an explanation. More importantly, we needed something to fill this space.

Our prolonged publishing hiatus stems from creative differences within the staff, primarily between those who wanted to write and those who wanted to drink. We briefly experimented with combining the two activities, with the results being a lot of vomited-upon MacBooks and an article on the grind-ability of various Disney songs. Out of respect for our childhood, we decided not to publish the list, but for those of you who are curious the winner was "I'll Make a Man out of You" from Mulan.

The pro-writing camp might have won out sooner had it not itself been divided. The main creative architect of our last issue announced over winter break that he had left his "comedy phase" and felt we should shift our focus to producing epic poetry, as well as reviewing works by contemporary epic poets and perhaps even publishing a list of our favorite epic poems from history. He suggested that we start with Virgil. Police are still searching for his body.

The writers disagreed on other issues as well, including the acceptable level of penis-related content and whether or not having one black person on staff allowed us to use the word "shawty" in an article. When it turned out that the staffer in question was actually Filipino, we were forced to scrap a whole series of articles we'd written about gender equality from the perspective of Soulja Boy.

By mid-March, the situation was looking dire. Our art director had yet to return from her ASB trip to Indonesia, where she had been training impoverished children to visit our website and generate ad revenue. The hipsters were long gone, having defected last semester when we decided to "sell out" by actually publishing something. More importantly, the failure of the Harvard Lampoon to publish on-time had left us with nothing to copy or plagiarize from.

Downtrodden and devoid of inspiration, the remaining Journal staff hitchhiked their way down to Mexico to spend the rest of the student activity money and lay low following one of our less successful airport pranks. Somewhere in the midst of this confusion and darkness, lost, alone and still drunk, we found our savior: El Amarillo Journal, a humor publication based out of a Tijuana community college. Ten minutes and one quick visit to Google Translate later and we had the paper you see before you.

PHI DELT BROTHER DESCRIBES LATE NIGHT ACTIVITY WITH GIRL IN GRAPHIC DETAIL

THE MEMBERS of Phi Delta Theta were surprised last week to see an actual girl emerge from brother James Hewitt's room the morning after one of their rowdier dinner parties. After walking her home, he returned to find a large crowd of his friends waiting eagerly for the juicy details.

"Well she had a bit too much to drink and wanted to sleep," Hewitt told the group, "So I showed her upstairs to my room, where I pulled open the covers and offered her my bed. I slept on the floor." He continued, "We talked for an hour or so about her childhood and her passions, and even made plans to go apple picking this afternoon."

"Dudes," he leaned in and smiled, "She told me she'd never felt such a deep connection."

The gang high-fived. "I was so chivalrous she was biting her lower lip," he added.

The couple was seen swing dancing at the date function, before Hewitt suggested that maybe she had drank enough following her second sip of vodka and cranberry. On the rare occasions when they did grind, Hewitt was careful to shift his erection from jamming into her tailbone.

"I knew it was there," said the lucky second-year, Rachel Golden, "but he was so courteous to try to hide it from me."

"I felt so respected I was sore the next day," she added.

Student observers speculate the rest of the brotherhood now wants to interact with girls as well and there are even rumors of a future date function at Yankee Candle.

Z SOCIETY AWARD FOR "MOST SELF-SERVING ORGANIZATION" GOES TO THE Z SOCIETY

THE Z SOCIETY is still rejoicing today after it was revealed that the winner for its prestigious "Most Self-Serving Organization" award was, in fact, the Z Society.

"Obviously, we are flattered," says member Leah Norton. "We work very hard to be self-promoting, both of our group at large and its members, and we're humbled to recognize ourselves at being best at it."

George Carlson, head of Secrecy and Anonymity, announced the winner last Tuesday. "We weren't sure if people would know that we won the award or not, so we decided to contact and inform the press ourselves," he explained.

"We've had a lot of time to be self-serving this year," added Awards chair Dyland Caston. "Our list of self-service is as long and illustrious as our list of members."

The group, however, has faced criticism for accepting its own award, especially so shortly after winning the "Z Society Award for Most Humane Eco-Friendly Socially-Responsible Biodegradable Organization" and the "Z Society Award for Being the Z Society."

Student finds sexual undertones in yet another novel

THIS PAST FRIDAY, the 1 PM discussion section of ENAM 3500 suffered through fifty minutes of second-year Howard Planker's insistence that The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn is riddled with homoerotic metaphors. What began as a discussion on the symbolism of the raft trip quickly devolved into a debate over whether Huck or Jim would be "the pitcher," with Planker arguing for Jim and the rest of the class taking the side of "shut up."

"I mean, at the beginning of the semester he was actually pretty insightful," remarked classmate Jeff Chidester. "I could totally see the Raven representing Poe's preference for interracial bestiality. But after his theory that Boo Radley has a foot fetish and his insistence that Jay Gatsby was a pre-op transsexual, we all began to suspect that he was a complete fucking idiot."

Though students have grown tired of Planker's nonsense, they report that their TA condones these ramblings, even encouraging Planker at times to continue with his "unique" interpretation.

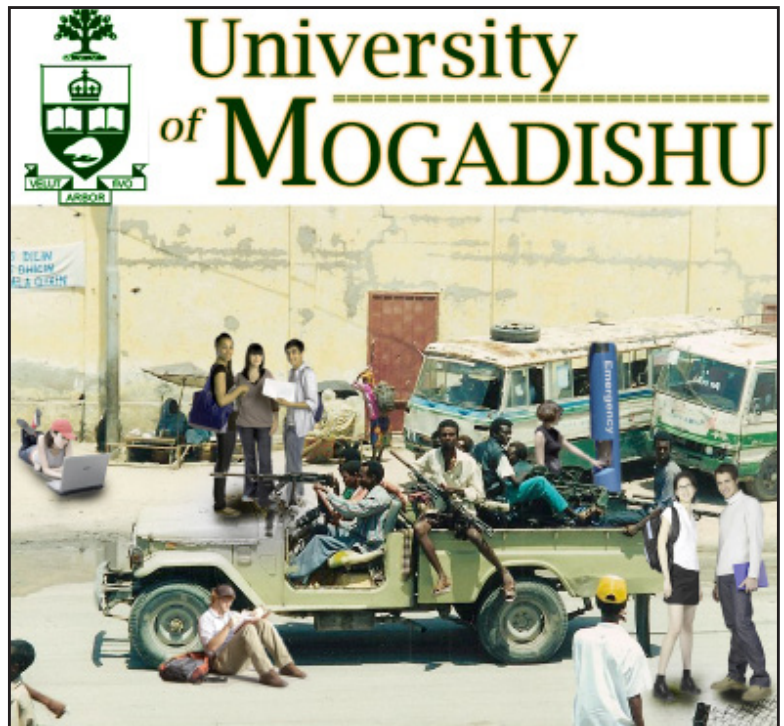

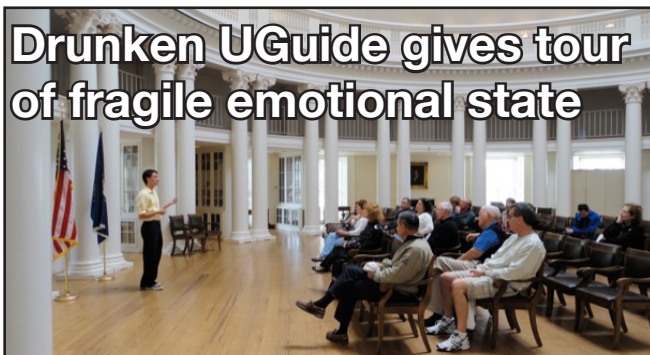

"Most students like to point out the 'overt sexuality' in Moby Dick," said the TA during his office hours at Para Coffee. "From the book's title, to the scene where Captain Ahab throws phallic symbols at a sperm whale, it's easy to understand how some might mistake Melville for one perverted dude. What Howard has done is apply these principles to literally every great American work."

"I'm curious to see how Howard performs in PLT 3360 next semester," he added. "I hear they're starting with the Constitution."

SORORITY GIRL PUT DOWN AT SIGMA CHI DERBY DAYS AFTER BREAKING LEG

WHAT STARTED OUT as a typical Derby Days, with sorority girls in tank tops being hit on by Sigma Chi brothers in the exact same tank tops, turned tragic when Delta Delta Delta first-year and odds-on-favorite Becky Harper collapsed on the final turn. Becky was five lengths ahead when a misstep sent her tumbling into the rail. The brothers of Sigma Chi watched helplessly from the grandstands as Delta Zeta sister Emma Weaver overcame 30:1 odds to win the race at 2:06:03.

Medical authorities rushed the track and determined that Ms. Harper had suffered thirteen different fractures in her legs, including a terminal injury to her left sesamoid. Officials on the scene unanimously recommended that the humane thing to do would be to put her down.

Not wishing for others to be responsible for her little, Harper's big sister, second-year Rebecca Moynehan, knew it was going to have to be her, not some doctor, who would have to do the right thing. After loading her shotgun, Moynehan took the downtrodden first-year out back and did what she had to do.

"It's always tough when a big sis has to put her little down," lamented Moynehan. "You hear about it happening in other sororities but never think it could actually happen to you."

The incident has led to widespread outcry across from students and activist groups across the University, notably the People for the Ethical Treatment of Sororities (PETS). Spokesman Josh Levonian has released the following statement in response to the event:

"What we witnessed today was barbaric and more degrading than usual, even for Derby Days. These poor girls are divided up amongst houses, systematically starved, and then forced to compete by their sisters. Until we see the day when sorority girls roam free throughout the Mad Bowl, we will not rest."

Hullabahoos To Include "More Hip Thrusting Than Usual" At Concert

THE HULLABAHOOS, UVA'S favorite all-male a cappella group and third least favorite organization on Grounds, announced today that their upcoming concert will feature at least 50% more hip thrusts than usual. While the vast majority of the University is apathetic and has never actually seen or plans to see a concert, the news has sent shockwaves through the first-year female community.

"After AVP threw in a solid eight minutes of thrusting followed by two minutes of sensuous rubbing and at least six suggestive crotch grabs, we knew the bar had been raised," remarked Hullabahoo President Michael Winters, while slipping into his leotard.

Not to be outdone, the Virginia Gentlemen also plan to spice things up at their next event and report that they may even smile or take off their jackets.

"A cappella is an ever-changing industry, and it's our job to give the crowd what they want to see at concerts," added Winters.

"Oh yeah, and to sing on occasion too."

STUDENT BELIEVES PRE-COMM GOT HER PREGNANT

MISGUIDED FIRST-YEAR student Cindy Langer recently learned that she is now pregnant and believes Pre-Comm to be the culprit, despite denials of this accusation from the McIntire School of Commerce.

"Pre-Comm only contains trace amounts of actual Comm," remarked McIntire Dean Carl Zeithaml. "It's really just there to introduce concepts to students and clear the way for Comm, which is usually a mess for students if proper measures are not followed."

Langer's boyfriend had tried to withdraw her from the program on time, but just moments before he could the deadline passed and pulling out was no longer an option. To make matters worse for her, she forgot to course-action her way out the morning after, and as a result is now stuck with the program for at least the next few months.

Dean Zeithaml also mentioned that students might know less about Comm than they actually think. "High schools are doing a great job educating students about Comm, but it isn't until college that most students are actually exposed to Comm and many aren't properly prepared."

Langer remains unsure if she will stay with the program or abort it all together. One thing is certain however: in the future she will think twice about engaging in Comm without taking the necessary prerequisites.
